THE OTHER SIDE.

Elsewhere in this issue appears a communication signed "Farmer." The writer appears to think he has a grievance because the Review said editorially a few weeks ago that it was only natural to expect the retail price of coal to go up when every other commodity had advanced. He further appears to think the Review is not a friend of the farmer because we happened to say, in effect, that the farmer should be the last to complain on account of the raise in the price of coal when everything he had to sell had so advanced in price, and when the product of the farm very materially effected the world's market in all lines.

"Farmer" complains of the 50 per cent raise in the price of coal because this increase is not commensurate with the increase in wages to the employees. It should not be necessary for us to answer this, as any one knows that wages is not the only thing to be considered in figuring out the cost of producing a ton of coal. If all the increase in the retail price is to go to the miners how are the advanced prices in other materials to be met?

We have taken the trouble to go thoroughly into the matter and the following comparisons will give some idea why coal must necessarily and naturally advance in price this year:

Blasting powder, keg, last year, $2.25; this year, $3.65. Mine props, per foot, last year, 24c; this year, 3c. Steel for cars and rails, per ton, last year, $22.00; this year, $40.00. Hays per keg, last year, $4.00; this year, $6.50. Prairie hay per ton, last year, $7.75; this year, $12.00. Car wheels, last year $12.00; this year, $21.00.

Lumber has also advanced in proportion.

All this and more goes toward producing a ton of coal, and besides there are additional war taxes imposed by both the provincial and Dominion governments. "Farmer" evidently never thought of all this and he has also overlooked the fact that miners have had their wages increased 20 per cent since the war broke out.

Regarding the installing of modern machinery we presume mine owners do this for very much the same reason as newspapers and farmers do. A farmer does not buy an up-to-date binder or plow in order that he may be able to sell his wheat to the consumer for less money. He does so in order that he may be able to handle his crop more expeditiously and profitably, and in doing so he, like the mine owner, increases his investment.

Since coal has advanced and dropped in price in the past, according to supply and demand and according to the cost of production, we can see no reason for worrying now as to what may happen when the price of everything else will go back to normal.

This is not the only coal mine that has found it necessary to raise the price. In looking over trade journals we notice that every coal mine on this continent and the mine just across the river from here is at the present time charging 50c a ton more than the Redcliff mine.

While we feel that it should not be necessary to go so fully into this matter at this unusually busy time, we have done so to bring out a little of the other side. What applies to coal mines applies to almost every line of business.

CALL FOR NAVY.

Newspapers and their readers are asked to assist in every possible way the enlistment of recruits for the Royal Navy Canadian Volunteer Reserve.

The Pacific sub-division of the R. N. C. V. R. is called upon to furnish large drafts of men for service on the Atlantic and Pacific patrol boats. It must be well known that German submarine activity is likely to break out on Canadian coasts the Pacific as well as the Atlantic. All this will entail a much greater system of scouts than has been necessary up to now. Extra ships mean extra men, and, moreover, this possible activity is chiefly aimed at our troops and munition ships.

There is a great demand now for men to man these new boats, which will be added, and it is hoped the young men will respond to the call.

LOOKING AHEAD.

In speaking at one of the meetings during the week of prayer, Rev. G. L. Gordon sounded a note in connection with the national service cards which should not be lost sight of. He said that since the object of these cards was no doubt to conserve and control the man power in order to get the best and most economical result, Redcliff would be in line to benefit by the scheme, as our natural resources make this town one of the cheapest places in Canada in which to live and also to carry on industries.

With the contemplated expansion in Canada for the manufacturing of war material these facts should be forcibly brought to the attention of the powers that be.

A GOOD INVESTMENT.

We would draw the attention of our readers to the advertisement in this issue in which the Dominion government calls attention to the Dominion of Canada, debenture stock.

This is not only a gilt edge investment but it furnishes an opportunity for those with any loose change to come to the assistance of the government in helping finance the country through these trying times, as the proceeds of the stock are for war purposes only.

For particulars read over the advertisement.

Several aliens who neglected to report as required by law, were fined $50.00 each in the Medicine Hat police court this week. If there are any aliens in town who are neglecting to perform this duty we might advise them that it would pay them to do so promptly. There is no time to monkey with the law.

Among the national service cards which have been received by R. B. Bennett was that of Baron Shaughnessy. He expressed his willingness to change his occupation at his present salary and to go to some other part of the Dominion if his railway fare was paid. The Baron may be patriotic all right, but that present salary clause puts Mr. Shaughnessy out of the running for a job in a shell factory.

Even including the soldier vote, the verdict of the British Columbia vote on prohibition is favorable. That means that the whole of the Dominion of Canada with the exception of parts of Quebec and the whole of the Yukon is under prohibition. The next thing is for the Dominion government to act.

"If we were to accept a peace such as that proposed by Germany, our dead heroes of Verdun and the Somme would rush from their three-hundred graves and spit in our diabolical faces," said Syphax Lauzanne, editor-in-chief of Le Matin in an address at the Ritz-Carlton hotel, Montreal, "France at War." It is refreshing to find men like this from the province of Quebec.

OTHER PEOPLE'S OPINIONS.

The Review is not responsible for the opinions that are expressed by its readers in communications printed under this head.—Publisher.

The Editor Redcliff Review.
Dear Sir: My attention has been drawn to an article in the Review under the above heading (I did not receive my copy of this issue). We were always under the impression the Review was in sympathy with the farmers out when one reads this article our impression seems misplaced.

With regard to the increased price of coal at the coal mine—all farmers consider the price charged unreasonable, the increase in wages to the employees is not commensurate with the rise of 50 per cent over the 1915 price. We have also always understood that this indication of improved machinery was for the purpose of reducing the working costs, but in this conclusion we must be wrong.

One cannot make a comparison between mining coal and growing wheat. The coal is always there; it has no small storms, frost or rust to destroy it and the hundred and one other things a farmer has to contend with before his crop is reaped. We are getting a high price for our wheat but we cannot regulate the price, we have to take the best offer.

We would like to know if when the price of wheat drops to 75c per bushel will the coal mine owner reduce his price for coal according. We do not think so; they have a happy knack when once the price is raised to keep it there.

The people of Redcliff may think this only a small matter, but very often these smaller matters lead to bigger. It is not impossible that by next winter the farmers will have a coal mine of their own in operation; this will, in no small measure place the railway trade elsewhere, and the co-operative farmers store which is so strongly advocated, may find its place somewhat changed where land is cheaper, and where there are equal facilities with Redcliff for the loading of grain, postal and telephone communication.

BRAVE GENERAL'S END

Start Travelled All Night For Merc's Death

Details of the death and burial of Major-General M. S. Mercer were conveyed to a message from the Canadian representative in the field. "The body of Major-General Mercer was removed from a demolished dugout to the Armory Wood. All the honours and decorations on his tunic had been cut off, but rank badges had not been touched. Examination showed that the General was severely wounded in the leg and had also received bullet wounds in the chest. Either of which would have been sufficient to cause death. Gen. Mercer's body was carried back and buried in a military cemetery close to Popper's. A large number of officers, including the corps commander and the late General's staff, attended the funeral. Some of the latter had travelled all night."

BAD GERMAN MEDICINE

Mischievous Twaddle Which the Fatherland Swallows by Order

Dwellers in the United States or Canada who assume that their countrymen are destined to have a share in the revolution of humanity and civilization, according to the theories of Professor Baron von Lichtenberg, are doomed to cruel disappointment. The "In the Destruction of English World Power" published under the auspices of the German Government has taken some astonishing statements. Professor von Lichtenberg's article longed for a violent denunciation of the sneaky and treacherous of Germany which he says stand out in strong contrast to the noble and magnanimity of the English people of motive and self-denial.

"Only people of pure race are able to create and develop pure and noble ideas." "The admittance with a sigh of regret that no original race in the world has remained absolutely pure, but Germany and Scandinavia, he declares are those who come nearest to the ideal and it is to them, he says, that we must look for 'Kultur.' All examples of Germany, on the other side, have suffered from a constant influx of foreign blood from the very first days of their existence, and because of this they have lost all understanding of 'Kultur.' There is not the slightest doubt that all French 'Kultur' grew up in the blood enough to admit the existence of a noble race, but now the German race, no more of the same importance. France, for racial mixing of races it is always the nobler blood which suffers and the mixed race become less prolific than the pure ones. It is here the human empire is made up of a multitude of races and has, therefore, produced no Kultur, except in the Baltic provinces, where a German 'Herron Volk' (master race) rules the lives of the lower strata of the population and serves as a basis for Kultur. The English race, he says, is a fact which is plainly proved by the grammar of the English language. As to America!

BULLER'S FINE DEATH

Running Along Parapet at Head of Famous Regiment

A partial account of Canadian heroism at the Sillabie fighting of the headwaters in the Yermi valley follows: The Princess Patricia's fought with their accustomed gallantry, led by the brave Colonel Buller, lately military secretary to the late Lord Curzon, and helped, although in a terrible way, to the German advance. Buller, his blood up, seeing his men giving way a little, ordered them to charge along a trench known as Gordon Road. They moved with a rush, and he to inspire their courage, Buller leapt up on the edge of the trench and began shouting: "On, boys! on! Break them in pieces!" He was thus encouraging them when a bullet pierced his heart. He never saw a finer death, one man said. "He looked very brave and handsome up there, outside against the sky, the only figure on the bank there, he looked so brave, and he to inspire and blast with anger, and his light arms pointing forward, his legs waving, but he never turned back until he saw the German had won. Some said it was 'odd,' the Colonel was still lying there on his back on the edge of the trench when they turned him over and brought him in."

The second-in-command of the Princess's Major Hamilton (Gall, was severely wounded, and many gallant officers fell.

RED-HEADED JENNINGS BREAKER-BOY FIGHTER

OW To Bad Star But Becomes Ball-Player, Lawyer, Manager—A Story of Success

Back in 1871, Jennings was a tiny blackened village, living a dreary existence on the great fields of empty coal in Northern Pennsylvania. Just as soon as the little boys of the town were old enough to care for themselves they entered the mine and began to work. Jennings was no exception, being under the earth in Hugh Jessup's gang. He was not, however, to distinguish him from his mates. He had a keen freckled face, topped by a wild mass of curly red hair, bright blue eyes, and a pair of muscular bow legs. He was the son of a miner, and in the natural order of things, he too, became a breaker boy. Young Jennings was just as uncouth and uneducated as his friends, but he had the vital spark of ambition buried in his bosom. A grimy mine if it was a dirty little town and a steady job in winning a pick, didn't suit him. He worked hard and at lunchtime and in the evening played baseball as every healthy boy does.

Ambition Leads
Soon his eagerness became more than a hobby. His fans agreed and he took stolen trips to Scranton and Wilkes-Barre with the Lehigh Valley team. The night of these towns lived in him the appearance there was that he had been from the mental and physical depression of Moccasin. There is no need to say the fight he made to work his way through college—a fight that at times he lost to the bar of fortune and made him one of the most respected players in the Lehigh Valley State. Hughes Jennings was a catcher of "Bulls" and he did not excel his fellow players of Lehigh Valley in manual dexterity and mental alertness. He attracted the attention of more than one major league manager. Chief Chapman, of Louisville, who offered him his first engagement. He was backed up by the team of the reformed catcher. He asked for $25,000 a month and $100 advance. That did not suit Chapman, who telegraphed: "Two hundred dollars a month and $100 advance is the best I can do."

"Send on the fly," Hughes yelled back, and when the answer came his boat was a boy almost too young. When Jennings left for Louisville, the crowd gave him a send-off which was not to be forgotten. It was in 1891 that the gawky, red-headed, red-haired catcher for a try-out. Ball players were a rough and ready lot, but they had to be. They enjoyed "roughing up" the recruits. Hughes was no exception. He was not easy to himself, but he was not. The first season was 11, and Chapman told the recruit he would have to play that corner.

As there was no uniform ready for him he had to wear a make-shift one of "Bulls" and "Clubs," who were just about as big as Jennings. Consequently, he was called "The Bull" and "The Club." Jennings looked "like a red-headed boy" and he was not. There was no place for him back of the bat, and when the regular first baseman recovered from his injury it looked as though the breaker boy was doomed for an indefinite stay on the bench. But a quick-witted nimble youth, who was in the hard to keep out of the line up, Chapman tried the youngster. He was not a star, but he was not himself. There was never any question then of his backsliding to the minors. He played that position until 1898, when his arm weakened, and he found himself back at the bat, out on the once again.

FOOTBALL IS A RIOT

Latin-Americans Go Wild Over Great British Game

The popularity of soccer football in Spanish America causes the following wall and rejoicing from the Pittsburgh Dispatch: Really we will have to revise our notions about South America. The revolutionary era is just for good, instead of fading vent for their pent-up emotions in starting an insurrection and shooting up a capital the ex-actable Latin now had a safe valve in football. It might have been baseball but for our lagging attitude toward our southern neighbors. We allowed the painful British to capture the hearts of the Latin, and of course, he took his cricket and his football with him. The American football play between teams representing Uruguay, Argentina, Chile, and Brazil brought the entire down to the two former teams, who played or tried to play off the first for the football championship of South America at Montevideo. Popularity? We would answer! Tickets were sold beyond the capacity of the stadium. Thousands thronged the gates, invaded the seats, and flowed over the ground. Drunkeny tried to get in, but the crowd made play impossible. The police attempted to cope with the frenzied mob, which resorted by setting fire to the stadium. The fire was not intended to charge the rioters and drive them from the grounds. Several persons were injured.

After this exhibition of sporting enthusiasm, rivaling our own most rancorous days, who shall say that there is no hope for the Latin? Any people who can get wrought up to that extent over a football game have never given proof of capacity for the high civilization. Imagine what an enormous impact it given a few exhibitions by the American fan of fire. Score one for humanity! These Latin and our selves must stir all to perspiration. The "Colonial" lady and John "the brother" under the chin.

Owing to the activity of submarines, it is understood, the navy will arm Japanese merchantmen bound for the Atlantic ocean and Mediterranean with six-inch guns.

The arming of merchantmen will begin with the steamer Suwa Maru, which sails for London, Jan. 20th. Steamships bound for the Atlantic ocean by way of the Panama canal, it is understood, will carry guns.

Results of Year's Prohibition in Oregon

During a year of prohibition in Oregon petty crime has decreased more than 50 per cent. Public drunkenness has almost disappeared. Motor car accidents have decreased 50 per cent. Vagrancy is far lower than ever before. Non-support cases have lowered by 50 per cent. Convictions to penitentiary have come down 30 per cent. That is the sort of record which the booze people feel demerits that prohibition is a failure.

Edison Says War Has Done Some Good

Edison points out the good which has already been accomplished by the war.

"The price of beer has been brought down to a safe point in England. The sea has been saved from a war, and has been presented with a womanhood which she refused to recognize in days gone by which he doubted her effective industrial population."

Mr. Harpott, minister of supplies has decided that rationing for sugar for the French people shall be one pound and a half for each person per month after February 1st, according to the Matin.

A Queek From Johnny Moore

JOHNNY MOORE IN PUBLIC OPINION

Laughter in Court

For an hour and a half the cross-examination had continued. Counsel and witness both were growing weary and impatient—the witness, because to him counsel's questions all seemed irrelevant; counsel because he could not get the witness to give a straight answer to a plain question. "Now," he demanded, "were you or were you not in plaintiff's office at 4 p.m. on this particular afternoon?" "If I had been," replied the asseverated witness, "how?" But before he could get further, counsel interrupted him. "I want no explanations," he snapped out; "merely a plain answer! I suggest that you were in the plaintiff's office. Is that not so?" The witness obstinately shook his head.

"Well," continued the barrister. "I want you to answer me," he repeated the witness: "I shook my head."

"Yes, yes, I know you did. I heard a rattie, but wasn't sure whether it was up or down or from side to side. Now, a plain answer, please! Yes or no?"

The home-made Cooking Store.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald McLachlan entertained last night in honor of Wm. Harvey, a Redcliff boy who has just returned from the front. A number of his friends were present and a most enjoyable evening was spent.

After being closed down for a few weeks to repair the furnaces and overhaul the machinery, the rolling mills opened up full force last Monday. The mill is now running night and day again with a staff of about 145 men.

We understand the Burns Club members are contemplating celebrating the anniversary of the Scotch poet in a fitting manner this year. The celebration will be as elaborate as in former years but the season will not pass by unnoticed.

The skating rink is now in excellent condition and is furnishing considerable amusement for the young people these days. The school hockey team is now practicing and hope to have a game on with one of the Hal schools in the near future.

R. C. LABOR MEN WILL NOT SIGN CARDS.
A public mass meeting in the Labor Temple of Vancouver under the auspices of the Trades and Labor Council, assisted with practically no dissenting voices the following resolution, which was telegraphed to Sir Robert Borden:

"Be it resolved that this meeting is opposed to the scheme of registration and urges the working people to decline to answer the questions or sign the cards."

HUNS GIVE CANADIAN BOY TWELVE YEARS.
A sentence of 12 years' imprisonment has been passed on Private W. Brooks, an Ottawa boy, by the German military authorities. It is believed that Private Brooks refused to make munitions which would be sent against the allies. The charge he was found guilty of was mutiny.
